Dear Editor

Fernando Álvarez Noguera

It is our pleasure to submit the research article entitled: “Helminths from Sigmodontinae rodents (Muroidea, Cricetidae) in Humid Chaco ecoregion (Argentina): a list of species, host and geographical distribution” for your consideration.

It is a valuable contribution since the Sigmodontinae rodents (endemic of American continent) are good models to study the host and geographical distribution of the helminths. The purpose of this paper has been to study the taxonomic and ecological aspects of the helminths found in the assemblage in six species of sympatric rodents (Sigmodontinae-Cricetidae) from Corrientes city (Humid Chaco ecoregion), Argentina.

Six rodent species were analyzed. A complete taxonomic list is provided with a total of 14 species of helminths. Here five new host and 12 localities records for Humid Chaco ecoregion, Argentina are reported. Moreover, ecological descriptors of component communities are given. These surveys expand the taxonomic knowledge of parasitic fauna of Cricetid rodents in Humid Chaco ecoregion, Argentina.

This manuscript has never been submitted, in whole or in part, to other journals. The six authors have all contributed to this manuscript and approve of this submission.
